

Modes of Presentation

1. Oral Presentations:

- Individual Talks: Speakers present their research or findings individually within a specified time frame, often followed by a Q&A session.
- Panel Discussions: A group of experts discusses a specific topic, sharing diverse perspectives and engaging in dialogue. This format encourages interaction and audience participation.

2. Poster Presentations:

• Participants create visual posters summarizing their research. Attendees can walk around, view the posters, and engage in one-on-one discussions with presenters.

3. Workshops:

 In-depth sessions led by experts, providing hands-on experiences or practical training on a specific topic. Workshops are interactive and may involve group activities.

4. Roundtable Discussions:

Small group discussions led by a facilitator, allowing participants to explore a particular topic in-depth. This format encourages open dialogue and knowledge exchange.

5. Ignite Talks (Lightning Talks):

 Short, dynamic presentations lasting a few minutes each. Speakers deliver key points concisely, often accompanied by visual aids. This format is effective for conveying ideas quickly.

6. Virtual Presentations:

 Given the rise of virtual conferences, consider including virtual presentation options such as pre-recorded talks, live-streamed presentations, or live Q&A sessions conducted online.

7. Interactive Demonstrations:

 Presenters showcase their work through live demonstrations, simulations, or interactive exhibits. This format provides a hands-on experience for the audience.

8. Poster Flash Talks:

• Brief talks given by poster presenters to provide a quick overview of their poster content, encouraging attendees to visit their posters for more in-depth discussions.

9. PechaKucha:

• A presentation style where speakers show 20 slides, each for 20 seconds. The format is concise and forces presenters to be clear and focused.

10. Speed Networking Sessions:

Structured sessions designed for participants to quickly network with others. This format is beneficial for making initial connections and exploring potential collaborations.

11. Birds of a Feather (BoF) Sessions:

• Informal gatherings of individuals with shared interests, allowing them to discuss specific topics or challenges in a less structured setting.
